COVER STORY Industry should go for ways to minimise operating costs

- Avinash Mayekar, MD & CEO, Suvin Advisors

As we stand at the entrance to 2019, how do you think the textile industry in general and particularly the segment you are involved in has done in the last one year?

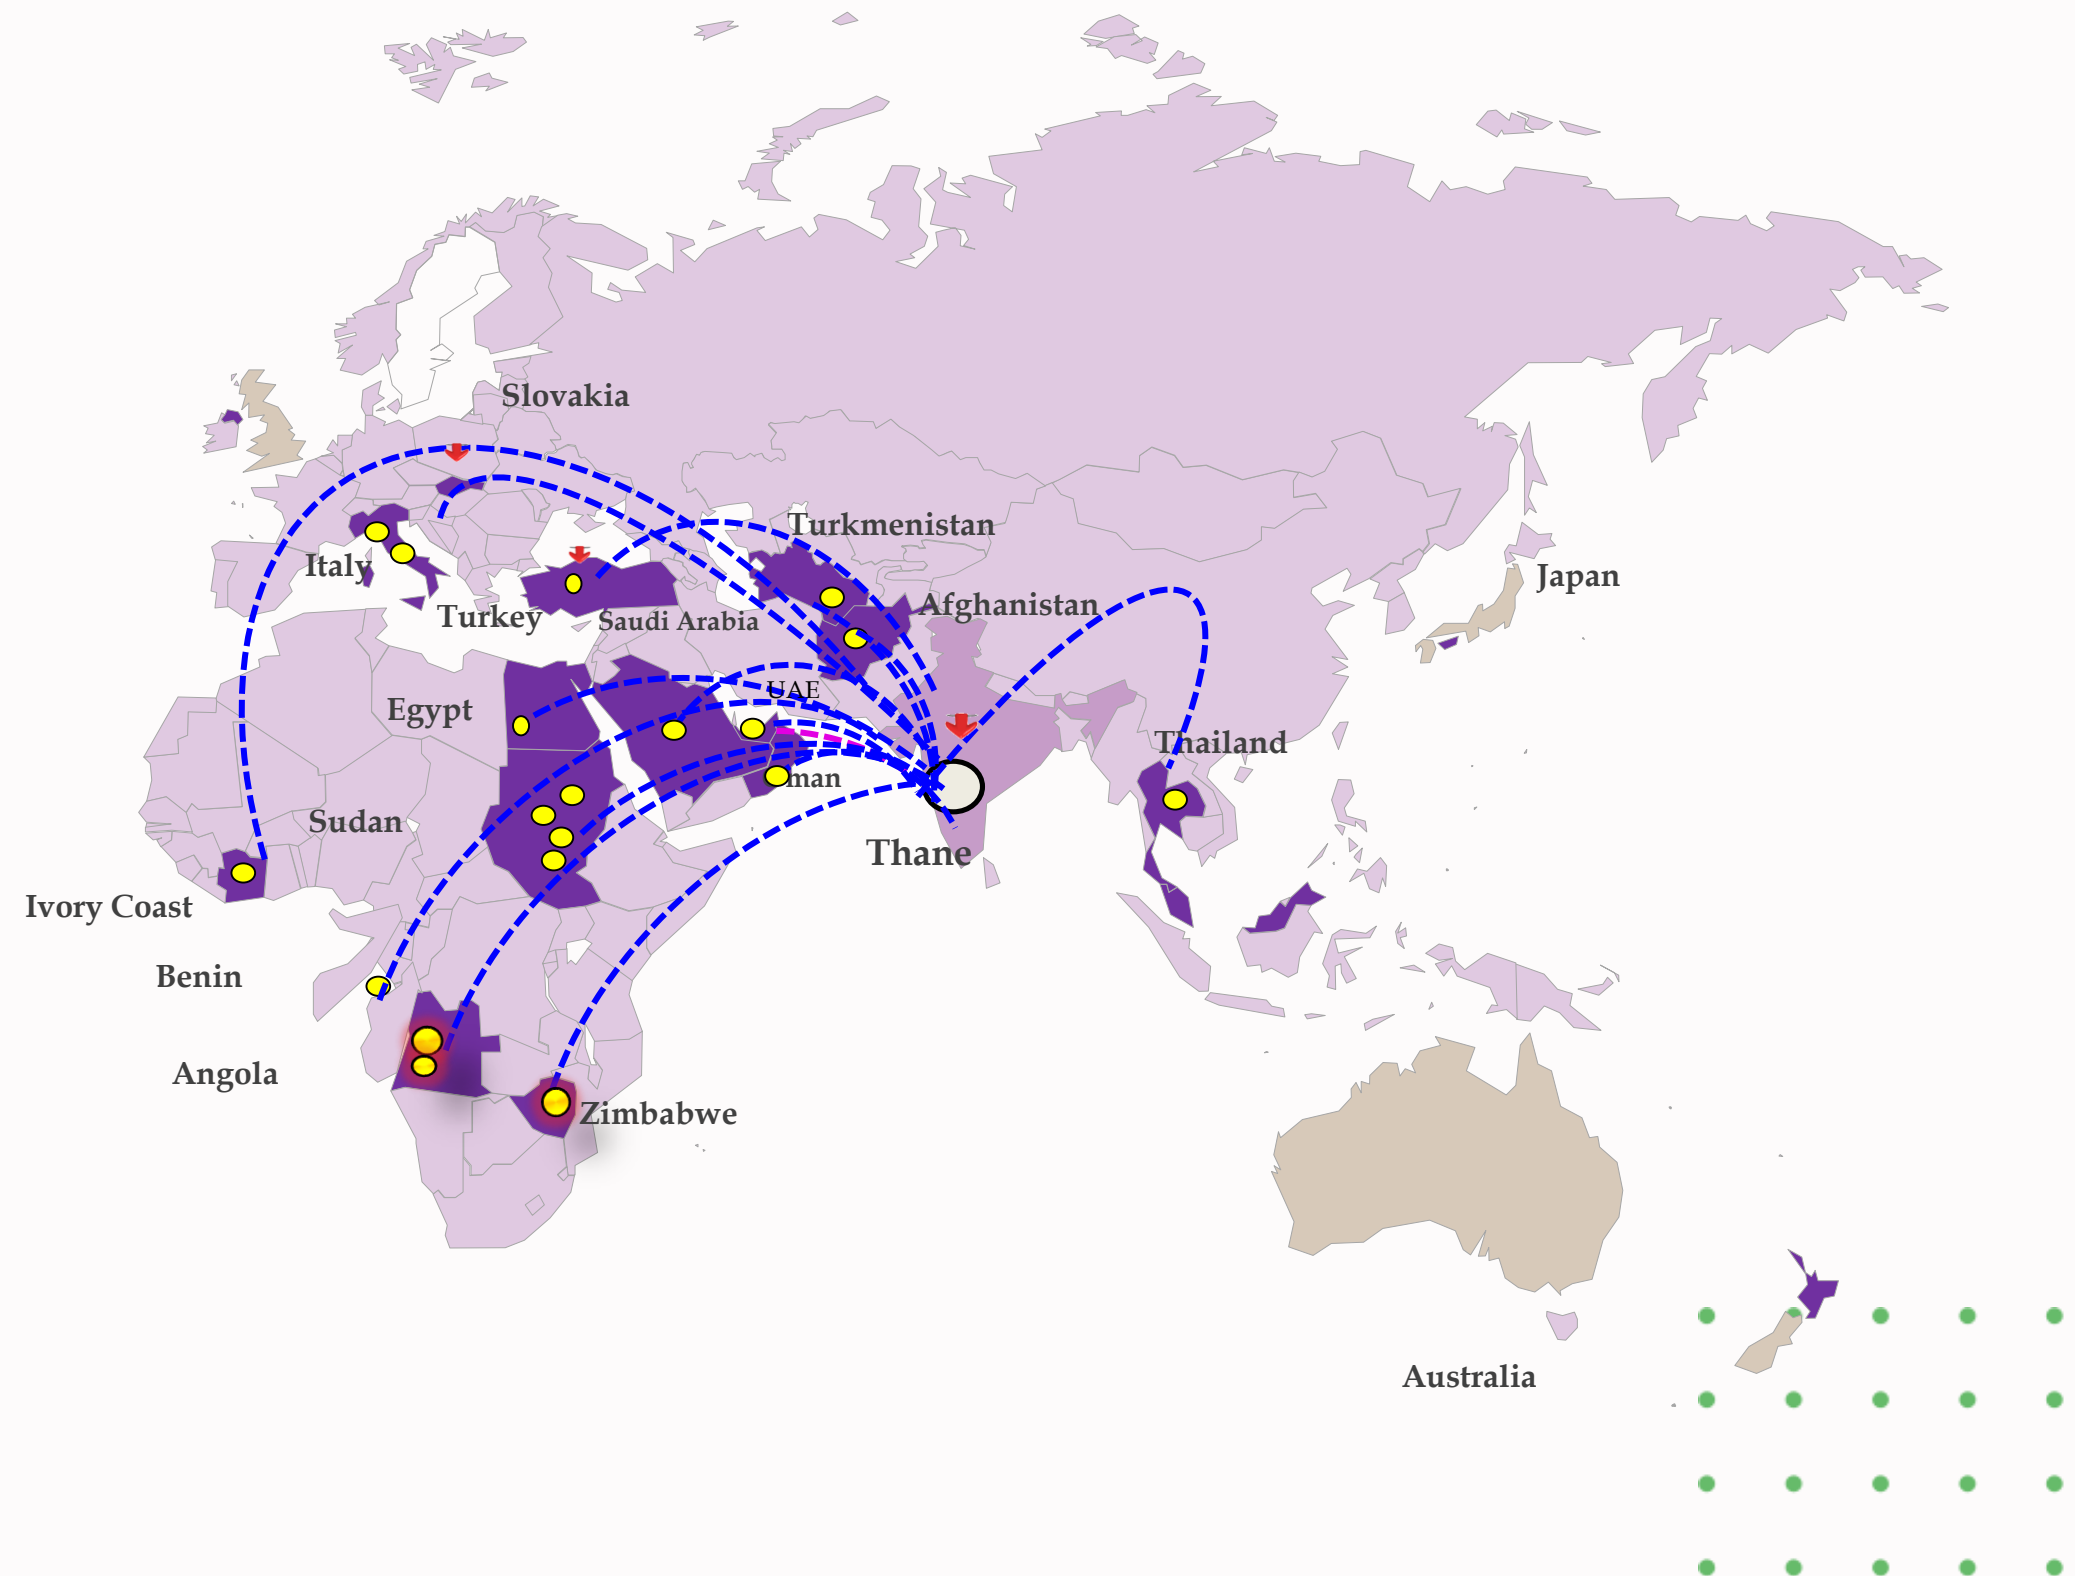

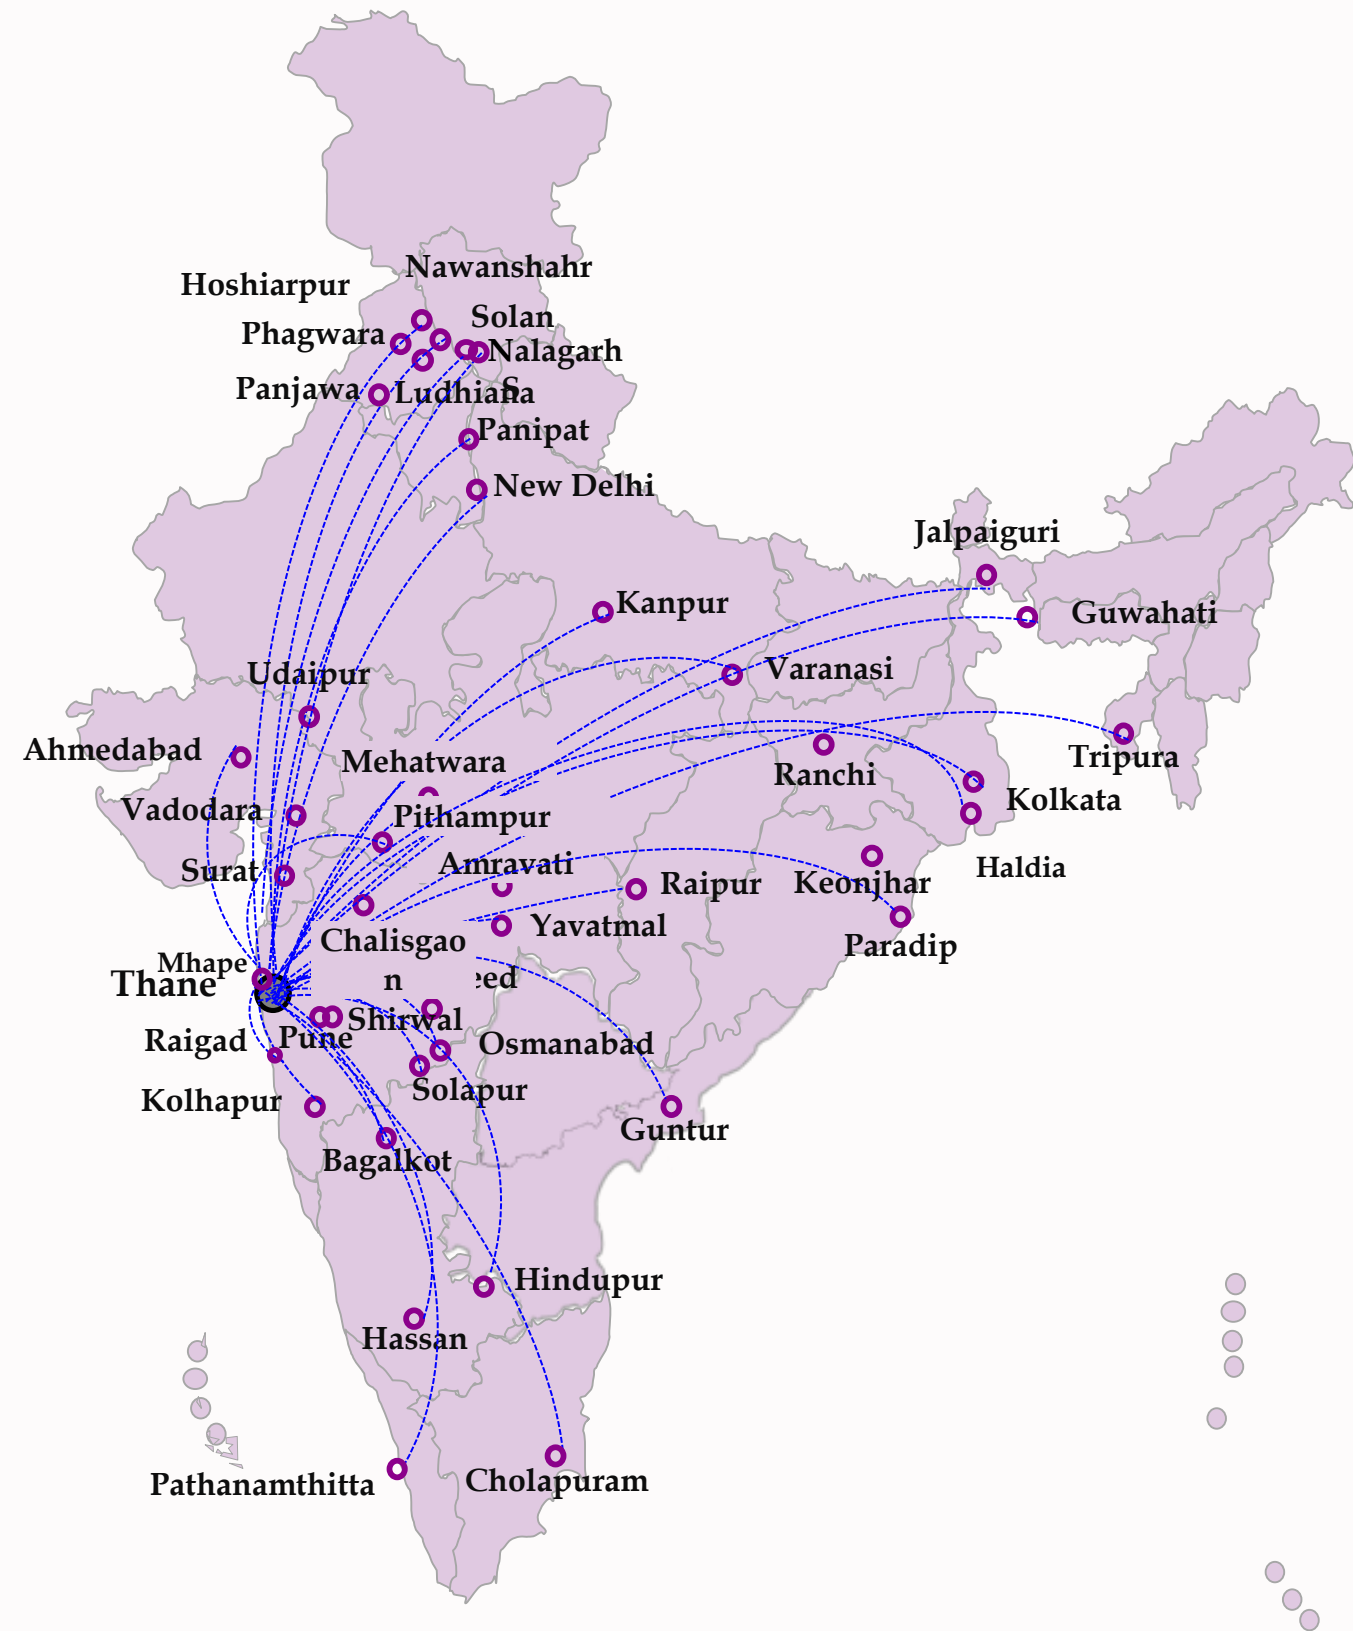

In the year 2018, textile industry has seen some improvements from the setbacks faced due to demonetisation and GST. Now each and every textile manufacturer, trader and entire value chain have accepted and understood that GST is now a part of the system, and they have to move forward with GST as applicable for their sector. This has led to a more effective business environment, especially for the complete value cycle. In case of cotton right from fibre to garmenting each and every segment is completely aware about the requirements of duty applicable to...

Clothing has gone beyond our conventional protection, it is a fashion, it is a functional aspect, it is a brand promotion, it is weather sensitive, it is a combination of various fibres - natural & synthetic, it can be collaboration of all physical as well as chemical properties, the aesthetic appeal of garments has seen a tremendous demand thereby giving the best of the fashion with comfort for the skin garments. The pandemic, however, has opened up a new dimension to this basic protection feature of the garments it is because today the term protection is not only restricted to the climatic phenomenon but the viruses which were present for years in the atmosphere have suddenly entered the super important zone owing to rise of 'COVID-19'.
